When these directives are general and relate to all of the deceased's data, they can be entrusted to a trusted third party certified by the CNIL.

In the case of specific directives, they can also be entrusted to data controllers (social networks, online messaging) in the event of death. They are subject to the specific consent of the data subject and cannot result solely from the latter's approval of the general terms and conditions of use.

In the absence of instructions given by the person during his or her lifetime, the heirs will be able to exercise certain rights, in particular:

- The right of access, if necessary for the settlement of the deceased's estate;
